

DEUTERONOMY:
Go In And Take The Land
Deuteronomy 1:1-8

1. In Deuteronomy, Moses leads the new generation of Israelites into a _____ renewal before they enter the land God is giving them.

- a. The _____ of the covenant renewal in Deuteronomy is similar to ancient Near East treaties between a greater power (suzerain king) and a smaller state (the vassal).

- b. The thoroughness of the people's covenant responsibility emphasizes that _____ of life is to be lived in submission to the Lord of the covenant.

"In the midst of world events, a relatively small community was being urged by Moses, the 'man of God,' to commit itself wholeheartedly to the Lord, before engaging in the struggle for the promised land. The kingdom of God's chosen people was coming of age, unnoticed by the great powers of the time, and struggling against what were, by human standards, impossible circumstances. The book provides a _____ for the kingdom of God in the modern world; it is a time for renewing commitment within the New Covenant and turning to the future with a view to possessing the promise of God."

- Peter Craigie

2. God's people must remember they have been _____ into covenant with God and are therefore responsible to live in accordance with His laws and His purposes for the future.

- a. The hope of God's people rests solely on the fact that they have a _____ relationship with God.

- b. It is imperative that God's covenant people both understand and walk in obedience to the revealed _____ of _____.

- c. The vision of God's covenant people must be based on God's _____ and not on circumstances.

- d. The vision that God gives His covenant people calls for _____ so that what He has promised becomes reality.
